Regional Conference on "Public Service Delivery in Arab Countries: Corruption Risks and Possible Responses"

29-30 September 2011, the Tunisian Republic

The conference gains particular importance in light of the ongoing regional events, which have put anti-corruption at the heart of public demand and highlighted corruption's negative impact on the daily lives of ordinary people. Participants include high-level officials of anti-corruption agencies, oversight bodies, and ministries; parliamentarians; and private sector and civil society representatives from various Arab countries; in addition to independent experts and representatives of donors and regional and international organizations.

The conference explores corruption risks in the health, water, and education sectors to develop comprehensive approaches and specific solutions that draw on international standards and comparative experiences, while taking national and local contexts into consideration; and to formulate concrete actions for implementation in 2012.

The draft conference programme is attached for your information. Please save the date of the conference, while we finalize the dissemination of formal invitations this coming week. For inquiries, please contact aciac@undp.org.
